

Photon Waitlist Privacy Notice

Photon is a browser project. This short notice explains how we handle your information when you join the Photon waitlist.

1. What Photon collects

We collect the email address you submit to the waitlist. The waitlist form does not ask for other personal information. The site may also store a small local browser flag after a successful signup so it can remember that you joined; this flag is not sent to our server.

2. Why we collect it

We use your email address to manage the Photon waitlist and to contact you about early access, launch updates, and relevant Photon updates.

3. Voluntary signup and consent

Joining the waitlist is voluntary. By joining, you agree to receive Photon launch and early-access updates. You can withdraw your consent or unsubscribe at any time using the unsubscribe option in an email we send.

4. Storage and processors

Supabase stores the waitlist email addresses. Vercel hosts this website. These providers are used only as needed to operate the waitlist and website. No other processor is currently used by the waitlist implementation.

5. Retention

We plan to keep waitlist information while Photon is in development and while you remain subscribed. We will delete your email address if you request deletion or unsubscribe, subject to any limited retention required for security or legal reasons.

6. Sharing

We do not sell personal data. We share it only with service providers required to operate the waitlist and website, as described above, or where the law requires it.

7. Your rights

You can ask for access to your email address, correction of inaccurate information, deletion, or withdrawal of consent and unsubscribe. Project contact information is listed below.

8. Contact

Project contact: TODO - add a project contact email before publishing this notice.
